

Amy O'Grady

Amy O'Grady serves as the Chief of Addiction Services for Columbus City Attorney Zach Klein. She oversees the Franklin County Opiate Action Plan on Klein's behalf. Prior to her current role, Amy worked for the Ohio Attorney General's Office where she led policy efforts in areas including addiction, mental health, and human trafficking. Amy also served as an appellate judge for the Tenth District Court of Appeals, a chief of the crime victim services section of the Ohio Attorney General's office, deputy director of professional standards for the Ohio Peace Officer Training Academy, and an assistant attorney general of the crime victims section that she later directed.